El Niño conditions are characterized by unusually warm ocean temperatures in the Equatorial Pacific.
THE BLOB

JET STREAM

El Niño Conditions
Would need 150% of normal precipitation in the Sierra Nevada and statewide for “drought buster” with a snowpack

Past El Niño seasons have resulted in variable precipitation

Moderate to strong correlate to wet in southern California

Above normal snowpack is needed!
More Confidence
Wetter

- Strong El Niño is present
- Correlates to above normal precipitation in southern California
- El Niño can impact the jet stream to bring more frequent storms - not necessarily stronger storms
- El Niño does not guarantee above normal precipitation and there have been several dry or average years in California during El Niño
- Drought will continue since 4-year rain deficits are 1 to 2 seasons missed
PREPARING FOR EL NIÑO

OFFICE OF EMERGENCY SERVICES

- Winter Weather Workshop
- Public Awareness Campaign
  - PSA radio/online
- Sandbags
- Damage assessment training/form
- Coordinating plans & alert and warning with cities
- Adverse weather map
Inspecting County road and drainage facilities
Free sand and sandbags available at 15 fire stations across the County
- Bags only at 30+ additional stations
Erosion Control Best Management Practices (BMPs)

Evacuation Planning
Cross-border Communication
Tribal Coordination
Vulnerable Populations
Water flows downhill from the mountains to the oceans through an interconnected system of both public and private drainage systems.

Know your flood risk
PROTECT YOUR PROPERTY

- Sandbags - try to direct debris flows away from your property to a recognized drainage device or to the street
- Seal conventional and sliding glass doors
- Protect your slopes from erosion
- Flood insurance
- Clear rain gutters, check for leaky roofs

REDUCE YOUR RISK

- Elevate critical utilities, such as electrical panels, switches, sockets, wiring, appliances, and heating systems.
- Waterproof basements, if possible.
- Move furniture and valuable documents to a safe place.
BE WEATHER WISE

- Turn Around Don’t Drown
  - Don’t drive or walk through flood waters
- Know the Facts
  - Flash Flood Watch vs. Warning
- Know safe routes from your home or office to high ground

INDIVIDUAL & FAMILY PREPAREDNESS

1) Make a Plan for your home, car, work, school and pets.
2) Build an Emergency “Go Kit”
3) Be Informed by having a hand-crank or battery-power radio and knowing your flood risk.

Alternatives to Detention (ATD)

Why is Alternatives to Detention important?

• Youth detained pending court are three times as likely to be committed to a corrections facility as youth with identical offending histories who were not detained.

• Youth who spend time in custody are less likely to complete high school, less likely to find employment, and more likely to suffer mental health problems.

• Detained youth are two times more likely to be re-arrested, adjudicated or convicted for new offenses, and incarcerated than youth who remain at home awaiting court or pending placement.
Alternatives to Detention (ATD) is a program that provides a continuum of detention alternatives to low-risk juvenile offenders who do not require secure detention.

Youth who have committed an offense and/or are currently on Juvenile Probation who would not typically need to be detained in Juvenile Hall, however cannot stay in their home due to other reasons, such as safety.

Youth who could possibly be detained in Juvenile Hall because of committing an offense, however they have been given the opportunity to remain in their home while they await further legal consequences.

Letter from the Director

The abuse of methamphetamine—a potent and highly addictive stimulant—remains an extremely serious problem in the United States. According to data from the 2012 National Survey on Drug Use and Health (NSDUH), over 12 million people (4.7 percent of the population) have tried methamphetamine at least once. NSDUH also reports that approximately 1.2 million people used methamphetamine in the year leading up to the survey.

The consequences of methamphetamine abuse are terrible for the individual—psychologically, medically, and socially. Abusing
